PROSPECTS FOR AN AGREEMENT OF CARPENTERS AND CONTRACTORS.

Today there seems to be more prospect of an agreement between union carpenters and contractors. The contractors held a meeting Saturday night, and today a committee will submit to the contractors the agreement, and it is said that some of them at least will sign it. If this is true, the others will have to sign also, the carpenters claim, or go out of business. Nothing has been done in the case of the painters.

COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT

MARRIES.

The marriage of Miss Ivah Critchfield and Prof. A. Martin Ragsdale, superintendent of the county schools, took place at 8 o'clock last night at Highland church, in the county. Rev. E. R. Overby, of Fulton, officiated. The bride formerly resided at Hammond, Ind., and is a teacher at Lone Oak. Prof. Ragsdale is one of the most popular young men in the county, as is attested by his election to the county superintendency.

A SEVERE COLD FOR THREE MONTHS.

The following letter from A. J. Nushaum of Batesville, Ind., tells its own story: "I suffered for three months with a severe cold. A druggist prepared me some medicine, and a physician prescribed for me, yet I did not improve. I then tried Foley's Honey and Tar, and eight doses cured me." Refuse substitutes.

J. C. GILBERT.

INVESTIGATING FOOD.

Prof. R. M. Allen, secretary of the food control station of the A. and M. college, Lexington, is in the city collecting food products handled by local merchants, for examination. Baking powder and vinegars are receiving most of the attention. He has been to other Kentucky cities and indictments have in some instances been brought against merchants as a result of his investigations.

DANGERS OF PNEUMONIA.

A cold at this time if neglected is liable to cause pneumonia, which is so often fatal, and even when the patient has recovered the lungs are weakened, making them peculiarly susceptible to the development of consumption. Foley's Honey and Tar will stop the cough, heal and strengthen the lungs and prevent pneumonia.

J. C. GILBERT.

THEIR FATHER SICK.

Messrs. Barney and Charles F. Akers, of the city, left this morning on the packet for Hampton, Ky., in response to a letter announcing the serious illness of their father, Mr. W. A. Akers, who was taken suddenly ill several days ago. The letter did not state the nature of the illness.

COUGH SETTLED ON HER LUNGS.

"My daughter had a terrible cough which settled on her lungs," says N. Jackson of Danville, Ill. "We tried a great many remedies without relief, until we gave her Foley's Honey and Tar, which cured her." Refuse substitutes.

Postmaster Palmer

of So. Glen Falls, N. Y., describes a condition which thousands of men and women find identical with theirs. Read what he says, and note the similarity of your own case. Write to him, enclosing stamped addressed envelope for reply, and get a personal corroboration of what is here given. He says regarding

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure:

"I suffered agonizing pain in the left breast and between my shoulders from heart trouble. My heart would palpitate, flutter, then skip beats, until I could no longer lie in bed. Night after night I walked the floor, for to lie down would have meant sudden death. My condition seemed almost hopeless when I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, but it helped me from the first. Later I took Dr. Miles' Nerve with the Heart Cure and the effect was astonishing. I earnestly implore similar sufferers to give these remedies a trial."

The Coronation.

The coronation of Edward is one of the greatest subjects for advertising at the present time. There are few trades or manufacturers that are not going to be benefited by it. For months to come the goods to be used; the jewelry to be worn, the colors to be fashionable, and the shapes of shoes and hats that will take their complexion from the coronation event, will be the subject of discussion and description throughout the world. Go to any steamship office to-day in this city and you will find that even at this early date staterooms, cabins, and choice places are bespoken for the early summer and the coming royal event. Speak to any of the prominent society people, and all their arrangements are made with due regard to the great fashionable display of the coming year. And when the pageant is over there will be more coronation gloves, coronation scarfs, coronation collars, coronation hats, coronation everything in fact, from souvenirs of the memento order to a good article of the king's own whisky, than can be figured on just now. That is why the coronation of Edward is going to be a good thing in its way, apart from its royal import. —National Advertiser.

A New Stock Exchange.

"There's another advance in Manhattan Elevated," said the broker, pointing to what looks like a railroad trestle built in what will be the trading floor of the new stock exchange building. "I see it is going up again." After something that might have been called a laugh from the customer who had traded on margins and "tips" before, explanations followed. The ceiling of the trading room of the new exchange will be eighty feet above the floor, so as to give ample room for resonant echoes of bids and offers; also perhaps a wide flight for brokers who occasionally happen to hit that ceiling. A big temporary scaffold has been built into this space, which rests on wheels and moves from east to west. The top is of ties, rails and a traveler, which moves from south to the forbidding north. From this traveler workers will raise the steel beams which support the high ceiling. But this elevated road, which moves at will in any one of four directions, is nothing new to the broker and his wise customer. —New York Press.

Duels in Germany.

The characteristic sport of the German student is dueling. Exclusive clubs or fraternities are organized largely for the cultivation and encouragement of this engaging pastime, and this, with the daily drinking bouts, fill the time of the average number, to the exclusion of every other interest. Every second German student wears glasses, and every fifth one has from one to ten scars on his left cheek—honorable wounds, won in the defense of nothing whatever. Duels are fought every week on the average by picked champions of the dueling clubs. Moreover, every German student must fight when challenged, whether for cause or not. That is the theory. In practice, however, the challenged party can easily avoid the challenge, if he wants to, by the simple device of selecting sabers or pistols as the weapons. These weapons can only be had by applying to the authorities, and then a board of honor sits on the case to decide if the cause given is sufficient to necessitate a duel with such dangerous weapons, and as the board never considers the cause serious enough the duel is never fought.

Louis XIV Was Not Tall.

Louis XIV, spoken of by his contemporaries as a man of majestic stature, was of only medium height. When the royal tombs of St. Denis were violated during the revolution, the body of this monarch was dragged out with the rest and discovered to be only five feet six inches.

WE GET SOME WORDS WRONG.

Some Familiar Quotations That Are Always Misquoted.

Everybody misquotes. Those quotations we use the most frequently we get wrong. We all say "The even tenor of their way." "When Greece meets Greece then comes the tug of war" should be "When Greeks joined Greeks then was the tug of war. When we say "The tongue is an unruly member" we misquote from James II., 8, where it is written. "The tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil." "Charity shall cover over the multitude of our sins" (Peter iv., 8) is almost always distorted into "Charity covereth a multitude of sins." We say "Welcome the coming, speed the parting guest," whereas the correct quotation is "Speed the going guest." Butler wrote in "Hudibras," "He that complies against his will is of his own opinion still," but we alter the sense as well as the wording of the passage by quoting continually, "A man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still." How often we hear people, quoting the passage on mercy from the "Merchant of Venice" say "It falleth as the gentle dew from heaven," whereas the bard wrote "Falleth as the gentle rain." We quote with great complacency "The man that hath no music in his soul," whereas what Shakespeare wrote was "The man that hath no music in himself." In his "Lycidas" Milton wrote, "Fresh woods and pastures new," but it is almost always misquoted as "Fresh fields and pastures new." In "Henry and Emma" Matthew Prior wrote, "Fine by degrees and beautifully less," a phrase which has become in popular use "Small by degrees and beautifully less." Just make a list of quotations which you hear used commonly, and then compare the popular form with the true one, by means of a book of familiar quotations and you will be amazed to see how seldom an author is quoted correctly. —New Press.

CANAL BOATS IN MANILA.

Some are Being Sent from This Country to the Philippines.

The easy-going native bargemen of Manila Bay will experience something like surprise when, a few months hence, they see towed into their harbor nineteen Erie canal boats, sent by the Philippine Transportation company. For several years these barges have been in use on the Erie canal. Now they have been towed over to the Morgan Iron works, at Ninth street and the East river, where they are being carefully pulled apart preparatory to shipping them to the Orient. Piece by piece the decks are being pulled up, beams and timbers separated and piled up on the pier, ready to be stowed away into the holds of huge steamers, there to remain until once more put together in Hong Kong. From there they will be towed across the China sea, down the Luzon coast and into Manila harbor. Large steamers cannot approach within two miles of the shore in Manila bay. For this reason it has always been necessary to send out cascos, or lighters, in which the cargoes are transported up the Pasig river to the city. These cascos are small and clumsy, and are owned by individual natives, who will not work until their supply of cash runs short. The iron canal boats are capable of holding five or six times more cargo than any casco, and the nineteen together could put all the cascos of Manila harbor into their holds. —New York Tribune.

STAGE TRAGEDY RECALLED.

Reasons That Impelled the Sad Suicide of Walter Montgomery.

Clement Scott, the dramatic critic, is in a reminiscent mood. In the Free Lance—more than thirty years after the event—he throws light on an old and mysterious tragedy of the stage. In September, 1871, London was startled to hear that Walter Montgomery had committed suicide two days after his marriage at St. George's, Hanover Square, on August 30, 1871. The act was incomprehensible to all Montgomery's friends. It has now been explained. It appears that when Walter Montgomery was "starring" in Australia he fell in love with a charming girl, who was an heiress. He proposed to her, was accepted, but the marriage was strongly opposed by the father of the fiancée. The actor, piqued, disappointed and apparently heart-broken, sailed from Australia to England. On board ship he was fascinated by another lady, and he married her directly after the ship arrived at home. A few hours after the marriage Walter Montgomery received a letter from the father of the Australian girl, saying that he had relented, that his daughter was dying of a broken heart, and that he was to hurry back to Australia to claim his bride and her fortune. Remorse, disappointment, despair affected the handsome actor's brain, and he rushed up to his room and put a bullet through his temple.

Crude Fancies in Asia Minor.

Perhaps Asia Minor is richer in crude and interesting fancies than any other country. When children hear an owl hooting from the cypress groves they cry: "Good news for us; good messages for you." If they catch an owl they hold it up by the beak and chant, "Palm Sunday owl, how does your mother dance?" The meaning of the rite is lost, but the habit lingers.
